

AAA Dare to Prepare

If you're a parent with a soon-to-be teen driver, you may find yourself asking any number of questions about what you and your teen are facing. National statistics on crash rates and fatalities make it very clear that learning to drive is a serious undertaking and one that deserves your close attention. Most parents don't get the facts about novice driving laws, licensing requirements, parental role in driving, insurance, and other issues until their teen comes home with their learner's permit.

AAA wants to help with the introduction of Dare to Prepare. Dare to Prepare is a pre-permit workshop designed for parents and teens to attend together, providing them with the critical information they need to know before teens take the wheel.

Offered by AAA Tidewater Virginia, this free workshop will walk you through the steps necessary to obtain a learner's permit and a driver's license in the state of Virginia. It also provides guidance and useful tools to help you and your teen go through the learning-to-drive process. The program is not intended to replace driver's education or even overlap such a course. Instead, it is designed to facilitate early discussion of driving safety and answer questions families may have.

During the 2-hour Dare to Prepare presentation, you will learn

- State and national statistics on teen driving
- Graduated licensing components
- Virginia requirements for obtaining a learner's permit and a driver's license
- Parent's role and responsibilities
- What to look for in a driving school
- Adding your teen to your auto insurance
- Sample parent-teen contracts and driving logs
- Practical tips on teaching teens to drive
- What the police are really looking for
- Resources and programs that can help

The workshop is free and each family attending will receive a free one-year Classic membership for each teen just for attending the full presentation. (Associate members must be of legal driving age and reside in the same household as the primary member. Associate members must have the same level of coverage as the primary member.)
